Project Story (from UVLT archives)

Doug and Carol Norman's old stone cape looks east across a sweep of open pasture and south to the neighboring farm, where Doug often visited his grandparents when he was a boy. During those years, Doug and his family became close friends with their neighbor, Katherine Riley, who spent summers in the stone cape. Knowing how deeply Doug shared her love of this old hill farm, Riley left it to him when she died. Since then, the Normans have added several parcels to the original piece, all of which they have conserved.
